The Chief Executive Officer

Dear Sir/Madam,

MANDATORY KNOW-YOUR-CUSTOMER AND CUSTOMER DUE DILIGENCE (KYC/CDD)
RULES FOR THE SECURITIES INDUSTRY IN TERMS OF THE PROVISIONS OF THE FINANCIAL TRANSACTIONS REPORTING ACT NO. 6 OF 2006 (FTRA)

Detailed guidance and rules based on international best practices and also where relevant, incorporating recommendations by the Securities and Exchange Commission of Sri Lanka are enclosed herewith.

You are advised to ensure that a proper policy framework and operations guidelines to give effect to the guidance and the rules so prescribed are in place within a specific AML/CFT policy developed by your institution for this purpose.

You are required to submit quarterly reports to the FIU on the last date of the quarterly period using the attached format at annexure 1. You are also required to ensure that your institution, as a securities market participant, is fully compliant with these rules, and inform us of the progress made by 31st January 2008.

These rules are issued under Section 2(3) of the Financial Transactions Reporting Act No.6 of 2006, and any contravention or non-compliance with the rules so prescribed will be liable to penalties as prescribed in the relevant provisions of the Act.

Yours faithfully,

H A Karunaratne
Actg. Director (FIU)

RULES ON
KNOW YOUR CUSTOMER (KYC) & CUSTOMER DUE DILIGENCE (CDD)
FOR THE SECURITIES INDUSTRY

Introduction

Public confidence in financial institutions, and hence their stability, is enhanced by sound practices that reduce financial risks to their operations. Money laundering and terrorist financing can harm the soundness of a country's financial system, as well as the stability of individual financial institutions, in multiple ways. Customer identification and due diligence procedures also known as "know your customer" rules, are part of an effective AML/CFT regime. These rules are not only consistent with, but also enhance, the safe and sound operation of banking and other types of financial institutions.

While preparing operational guidelines on customer identification and due diligence procedures, institutions are advised to treat the information collected from the customer for the purpose of opening of accounts, as confidential and not divulge any details thereof for cross-selling or for any other purposes, and that the information sought is relevant to the perceived risk, is not intrusive and is in conformity with the rules issued hereunder.

The mandatory rules on KYC/CDD include the following sections:

- Part I - General Rules
- Part II - Specific Rules
- Part III - Specific Customer Identification
- Part IV - Declaration Format
- Part V - Suspicious Transaction Report Format/Instructions

These rules are issued under Section 2(3) of the Financial Transactions Reporting Act No.6 of 2006 and any contravention of, or non-compliance with the same will be liable to the penalties under the relevant provisions of the Act.

PART I
GENERAL RULES FOR THE SECURITIES INDUSTRY

A. ANTI-MONEY LAUNDERING PROGRAM

1. Introduction

An institution should develop and implement a written program reasonably designed to prevent it from being used for money laundering and terrorist financing. This program should be approved in writing by the directors of the company which carries out the business of broker/dealer/market intermediary or by the trustee/s of a unit trust. It should include:

- the establishment of policies, procedures, and internal controls;
- an ongoing employee training program;
- an independent audit function to test the program for compliance; and
- appropriate compliance management arrangements. The type and extent of measures to be taken for each of these requirements should be tailored with respect to the risk or vulnerability to money laundering and terrorist financing and the size, location, and activities of the business.

2. Policies and Procedures

Written policies and procedures should set forth clearly the details of the program, including the responsibilities of the individuals and departments involved. Policies, procedures, and internal controls should be reasonably designed to detect activities indicative of money laundering and to assure compliance with anti-money laundering legislation. An institution should monitor the operation of its program and assess its effectiveness. Customer identification and verification procedures, as well as procedures regarding the detection and reporting of suspicious activity, should be included as a part of the anti-money laundering program.

3. Employee Training

The training program for employees of the institution should provide both a general awareness of overall anti-money laundering legislation and money laundering issues, as well as more job-specific guidance regarding particular employees' roles and functions in the anti-money laundering program. For employees whose duties bring them in contact with anti-money laundering legislation or possible money laundering activity, training should occur when the employee assumes those duties, with subsequent periodic updates and refreshers.

4. Independent Audit

The institution should conduct periodic independent testing of its program to assess compliance with and the effectiveness of the program, and to assure that the program is functioning as designed. Such testing may be accomplished either by a qualified outside party, or by employees of the institution so long as those same employees are not involved in the operation or oversight of the programme. A written assessment or report should be a part of the review, and any recommendations should be promptly implemented or submitted to the directors of a fund company, general partner of a limited partnership, or trustee of a unit trust for consideration.

5. Compliance Management

The institution should charge an individual (or group of individuals) with the responsibility for overseeing the anti-money laundering program. The person (or group of persons) should be knowledgeable regarding anti-money laundering legislation and money laundering issues and risks, and empowered with full responsibility and authority to develop and enforce appropriate policies and procedures throughout.

6. Financial Services Groups and Anti-Money Laundering Programs

An institution often is part of a large financial services group. These groups may choose to establish an anti-money laundering program that applies to all institutions that they sponsor, operate or advise. Further, large financial services groups that have banks, broker/dealers or insurance companies as their core business may already have in place an anti-money laundering program that applies to all companies within the group. A financial services group may utilize the group's anti-money laundering program, so long as every institution is covered by an anti-money laundering program containing the four elements set forth above. Each institution— through its board of directors, general partner or trustee - should have clear written documentation indicating that it has adopted an anti-money laundering program.

B. CLIENT IDENTIFICATION AND VERIFICATION PROCEDURES

An institution may apply client verification procedures on a risk-sensitive basis. An institution should establish the bases for such risk determinations and should be able to justify its assessments to its regulator.

1. Responsibility for client identification and verification

An institution has a responsibility for verifying the identity of the investor, and the beneficial owner of the investor when it is apparent that an account is beneficially owned by a party other than the investor, and performing more general “know your customer” procedures following a risk-based approach. The general “know your customer” procedures, including obtaining information, such as financial background and business objectives, in order to develop a business and risk profile and to ensure that transactions being conducted are consistent with that profile (including, where necessary, the client's source of funds).

2. Verifying investor identity

Measures to identify and verify the identity of the investor, and the beneficial owner of the investor when it is apparent that an account is beneficially owned by a party other than the investor, to the extent reasonable and practicable, may be determined on a risk sensitive basis depending on the type of investor, business relationship or transaction, and the types of accounts opened by the institution. This applies to units sold or redeemed by the institution or through any market intermediary. The verification should provide a reasonable basis for an institution to believe that the true identity of the investor is adequately known. Where the risk that an institution will not know the true identity of an investor is higher (e.g., accounts for politically exposed persons or entities with complex structures; accounts for nationals, residents, or entities from countries considered to be non-cooperative or inadequately regulated, etc.), an institution should apply more stringent client identification measures. Investor identification and verification processes should be properly documented in each case, and such records should be kept for at least six years after the business relationship has ended.

3. An institution may rely on documents as well as on non-documentary methods, or a combination of both, in order to identify investors and verify their identity. With respect to natural persons, reliable verification methods could include the following:
  - An unexpired government-issued identification evidencing nationality or residence and bearing a photograph or other similar safeguards, such as a driver's license or passport;
  - Independently verifying the investor's identity through the comparison of information provided by sources such as public database, or other sources;
  - Checking references with other financial institutions;
  - Obtaining account statements; and
  - Face-to-face meetings; interviews; statements; home visits; references from previous business relationships. With respect to non-natural persons, reliable verification methods could include the following:
    - Obtaining proof of incorporation or similar evidence of the legal status of the legal person or arrangement, as well as information concerning the investor's name, the names of trustees, legal form, address, directors, and documents evidencing the power of a person to bind the legal person or arrangement;
    - Forming an understanding of the ownership and control structure; and
    - Identifying the natural persons with a controlling interest and identifying the natural persons who comprise the management of the legal person or arrangement.
4. With respect to another institution, and/or a fund of funds, an institution need not verify the identity of the underlying beneficial owners of an investing Collective Investing Schemes (CIS) or fund of funds that:
  - Is regulated or registered;
  - Is based in a jurisdiction that the an institution is satisfied has appropriate anti-money laundering legislation;
  - Has in place an anti-money laundering program; and
  - Is supervised for, and has measures in place to comply with, CDD requirements.

5. Timing of identification and verification

An institution should identify the investor before or during the opening of an account or accepting an investment. An institution should verify identity as soon as possible, before or after the opening of an account or accepting an investment, for purposes of assuring that the risks are effectively managed. In this regard, it is essential not to interrupt the normal conduct of business.

Where the investor's identity has yet to be verified, an institution will need to adopt risk management procedures with respect to the conditions under which an investor may utilise the account or investment prior to verification. These procedures should include a set of measures such as a limitation of the number, types and/or amount of transactions that can be performed, and the monitoring of large transactions being carried out of expected norms for that type of relationship. Where it is not possible after reasonable efforts to verify the identity of an investor, an institution should consider halting transactions or terminating its relationship and also should consider making a Suspicious Activity Report to the appropriate authorities in relation to the investor. It may be appropriate for an institution to consult with its regulator and appropriate law enforcement agencies prior to halting transactions in a particular account or terminating its relationship with any investor.

6. Potential low risk situations

As noted above, the identity verification procedures of an institution may be risk-based depending on the type of investor, business relationship, or transaction. Where there are low risks, it may be appropriate for an institution to apply simplified verification procedures. These procedures, of course, must still be sufficient for the institution to achieve the goal of verification – establishing a reasonable belief that it knows the true identity of its investor.

In the event a broker firm/CDS obtains a confirmation from a bank which maintains a bank account for a client trading through a broker firm, to the effect that, when opening and maintaining the bank account, the bank has followed the KYC and CDD requirements, the broker firm/CDS may at its discretion considering the risk level of the client, waive off the above requirements to verify the source of funds received.

PART II

SPECIFIC RULES FOR THE SECURITIES INDUSTRY

1. Introduction

The broker/dealer firm/market intermediary must obtain sufficient evidence of the identity of any client as soon as reasonably practicable after it has contact with a client.

2. Any broker/dealer firm/market intermediary should not proceed further with the transaction if satisfactory evidence of identity has not been provided unless directed to do so by the Financial Intelligence Unit.
3. Every broker/dealer firm/market intermediary should take reasonable care to make and retain adequate records for 6 years.
4. For the avoidance of doubt, for each transaction the firm should retain a record of;
  - The name and address of its customers;
  - The name and address (or identification code) of its counter party,
  - The investment dealt in, including price and size;
  - Whether the transaction was a purchase or a sale;
  - The form of instruction or authority;
  - The account details and the form in which the funds were paid to the firm (including, in the case of cheques, sort code, account number and name);
  - The form and destination of payment made by the firm to the customer;
  - Whether the investments were held in safe custody by the firm or sent to the customer or to his order, and if so to what name and address;
5. Every broker/dealer firm/market intermediary shall conduct on-going due diligence on the business transactions with the customer to ensure that the transactions are consistent with the firm's knowledge of the customer, the customer's business risk and source of income.

6. Every broker/dealer firm/market intermediary shall report to the Financial Intelligence Unit:-
  - Any act which the firm suspects is preparatory to an offence under the provisions of the Convention on the Suppression of Financing of Terrorism Act No. 25 of 2005; or
  - Any transaction or attempted transaction which the firm has reasonable suspicion that it may relate to the commission of any unlawful activity in terms of the Financial Transactions Reporting Act No. 6 of 2006 and Prevention of Money Laundering Act No. 5 of 2006.
7. Every broker/dealer firm/market intermediary to appoint a Compliance Officer to be responsible for ensuring compliance with the requirements of the Financial Transactions Reporting Act No. 6 of 2006.
8. The Compliance Officer should establish and maintain procedures to
  - Implement the customer identification requirements
  - Implement procedures for record keeping
  - Implement a process of monitoring the customer transactions
  - Implement a system for reporting suspicious activity to the Financial Intelligence Unit
  - Make employees aware of the law relating to money laundering and terrorist financing
  - Screen all persons before hiring them as employees to ensure ML/TF risks are adequately addressed.
